Iraqi Probe Slams Blackwater

Investigation finds security guards fired first in shootings

BAGHDAD | An official Iraqi investigation into a deadly shooting involving Blackwater USA security guards concluded 17 Iraqis were killed and found the gunfire was unwarranted, the government said Sunday. It also said the shootings amounted to a deliberate crime and recommended those involved face trial.

The Blackwater guards are accused of opening fire on Iraqi civilians in a main square in Baghdad on Sept. 16. They claimed they came under fire first.

The Iraqi investigative committee, which was ordered by Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, found that convoys from the Moyock, N.C.-based security company did not come under direct or indirect fire before the men shot up the intersection. "It was not hit even by a stone," government spokesman Ali al-Dabbagh said in a statement.

The three-member Iraqi panel led by Defense Minister Abdul-Qader al-Obeidi put the casualty toll at 17 killed and 23 wounded, giving a higher number than other estimates. It determined that Blackwater guards sprayed western Baghdad's Nisoor Square with gunfire without provocation.

Al-Dabbagh said the Cabinet would weigh the Iraqi findings with those of a joint U.S.-Iraqi commission "and subsequently adopt the legal procedures to hold this company accountable." SAMEER N. YACOUB (AP)

Parents of Triplets Wonder Why This Is News

It won't take much for Jenna and William Cotton, of Marysville, Ohio, to remember the birthday of their new baby. Daughter Kayla was born Tuesday, which was Oct. 2—the same date her brothers were born. Ayden arrived on Oct. 2, 2003; Logan was born Oct. 2, 2006. The parents said they had a feeling their baby daughter might come a couple of days past her Sept. 30 due date. Sure enough, Jenna Cotton, 23, began having contractions early Tuesday, hours before a planned birthday party for the boys. She had a doctor's appointment scheduled later in the day and hung in for the party. Ayden, the 4-year-old, wanted to know if his new baby sister would make the festivities, Jenna said. (AP)

These are the salad days for one lucky skunk. Officer James Kellett said a skunk whose head was stuck in an empty salad dressing jar wandered into the police station's parking lot Thursday in Carrollton Township, Mich. He wanted to help without getting sprayed. So he grabbed a BB gun and shot at the jar from 40 feet. The shots shattered the glass; freed, the skunk ran off. The makers of T. Marzetti's salad dressing are sending Kellett coupons as a reward. (AP)

Deputy Kills 6 in Shooting Rampage

Off-duty officer fatally shot after killing spree at Wisconsin house

CRANDON, WIS. | An off-duty sheriff's deputy went on a shooting rampage at a home in northern Wisconsin early Sunday, killing three high school students and three recent graduates before authorities fatally shot him, officials said. Another victim was in critical condition.

The suspect was 20 years old and worked full-time as a Forest County deputy sheriff and part-time as a Crandon police officer, Sheriff Keith Van Cleve said.

A seventh shooting victim was in critical condition at a hospital in nearby Marshfield, said Police Chief John Dennee. A Crandon police officer who fired back was treated for minor injuries and then released.

A Wisconsin State Trooper stands guard on Sunday at an intersection in Crandon, Wis., where a law enforcement employee killed six people and injured a seventh.

Gary Bradley, mayor of the city of about 2,000, said earlier Sunday that the suspect had been brought down by a sniper, but Van Cleve would not confirm that officers shot the suspect.

It wasn't immediately clear what the suspect's motive was. The shooting occurred in a white, two-story duplex about a block from downtown Crandon.

One of the dead was 14-year-old Lindsey Stahl, said her mother, Jenny Stahl, 39.

She said her daughter called her Saturday night and asked whether she could sleep over at a friend's house. Jenny Stahl agreed.

"I'm waiting for somebody to wake me up right now. This is a bad, bad dream," the weeping mother said. "All I heard it was a jealous boyfriend and he went berserk. He took them all out."

The sheriff said he would meet with state Attorney General J.B. Van Hollen on Monday morning to discuss the case. Dennee said the state Department of Criminal Investigation will handle the case because the suspect was a deputy and officer. ROBERT IMRIE (AP)

WASHINGTON | President Bush's health secretary said Sunday he does not expect Congress to override a veto on children's insurance, and warned that the popular program could be at risk unless Democrats restrain spending.

Health and Human Services Secretary Mike Leavitt said Bush would be willing to provide more than the $5 billion increase over five years that he first proposed. He declined to say how much additional money was possible.

But in a warning to Democratic leaders who have pledged to stick with their $35 billion increase, Leavitt said Bush would not waver from his position, despite attempts to override his veto last week.

Parking Abuse Fuels Public Outrage

Citizens, governments try to stem illegal use of handicapped spaces

XENIA, OHIO | When Maureen Birdsall took her disabled, 92-year-old grandfather to a California hospital, she lost the only available handicapped-parking spot to a woman in a red corvette.

Much to Birdsall's surprise, the woman didn't appear to be disabled. "I sat there dumbfounded," she said.

She was not the only one outraged by seemingly healthy people illegally using the handicapped parking spaces. Birdsall started a Web site, handicappedfraud.org, where she received postings from people in 26 states with similar complaints.

The postings came complete with the license plates and handicapped-permit numbers of vehicles suspected of illegally using handicapped spaces. Birdsall began sending them to motor vehicle departments.

Phillip Shaw often has trouble finding handicapped parking spaces in his hometown of Xenia, Ohio. The city is fining people $250 for illegally using the spaces.

Her whistleblower Web site is part of a growing movement by residents, states and towns to crackdown on able-bodied drivers who park in spaces labeled for the disabled.

Xenia, Ohio, recently increased fines to at least $250 from $40.

In Texas, Corpus Christi is sending out citizen volunteers to ticket offenders.

Waltham, Mass., dedicates police details solely for the enforcement of handicapped-parking laws. The city has spent about $6,000 in grant money for overtime, but gotten back about $32,000 in fines.

Governments are getting tougher because more placards are in circulation and the public has become more aware of their abuse, said Tim Gilmer, editor of New Mobility, a magazine for wheelchair users with active lifestyles.

Massachusetts is urging its police to crack down after a year-long investigation discovered that nearly one-third of the placards found on cars parked in downtown Boston were being used by people who were not disabled.

"It strikes a nerve with people," said Ann Dufresne, spokeswoman for the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles. "They are taking spots away from those people who really need it." JAMES HANNAH (AP)

Cause of N.Y.C. Blast Unknown

NEW YORK | Investigators have found no evidence that a gas leak caused an explosion on Saturday that rocked a Manhattan apartment building and injured more than 20 people, a utility company spokesman said Sunday. Fire Commissioner Nicholas Scoppetta had earlier said a gas leak in a first-floor apartment caused the blast.

The fire department was still investigating and had no word Sunday on a specific cause of the explosion, which left four girls in critical condition. (AP)

Election Leaves Pakistan in Limbo

Country waits to see if high court will uphold Musharraf's landslide

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN | Pakistan has entered a period of political limbo, caught between Gen. Pervez Musharraf's presidential election win and a future Supreme Court ruling on whether he was even eligible to run.

Musharraf scored an overwhelming victory Saturday in a vote by lawmakers that was boycotted by much of the opposition in protest against the U.S.-allied military leader.

The country must now wait at least 10 days for the Supreme Court to either confirm the result or disqualify Musharraf because he ran for re-election while retaining his position as army chief, which the constitution prohibits.

Although the court this year has issued rulings that have shaken Musharraf's dominance, analysts question whether it would dare deny him victory and potentially throw the country into chaos. On Sunday, The Nation newspaper printed a cartoon showing Musharraf frowning toward the Supreme Court, his fingers crossed behind his back.

"The government cannot afford to take the courts for granted," an editorial in the Lahore-based daily said.

Saturday's election has gone down among the most controversial in Pakistan's turbulent 60-year history. Musharraf won 671 votes, while a retired judge who was his main rival received just eight. In all, 1,170 federal and provincial lawmakers were eligible to vote.

Musharraf dismissed criticism that the boycott had undermined the election's legitimacy. "Democracy means majority, whether there is opposition or no opposition," he told reporters. "A majority, a vast majority, have voted for me and therefore that result is the result."

Town in Darfur Is Destroyed

15,000 civilians flee as troops raze area in retaliation for attack

KHARTOUM, SUDAN | A Darfur town under the control of Sudanese troops has been razed in apparent retaliation for a rebel attack on a nearby base of African peacekeepers. U.N. officials who inspected the town said Sunday that about 15,000 civilians had fled the area.

International aid workers and United Nations officials dismissed claims by some rebel chiefs that 100 people had died in the North Darfur town of Haskanita.

The officials said the town emptied as the army moved in last Sunday, and troops started burning it on Wednesday.

A U.N. statement did not say who set fire to the ethnic African town but said Sudanese government forces took control after suspected Darfur rebels attacked the nearby base of African Union peacekeepers a week ago, killing 10 peacekeepers.

A U.N. official who had just returned from Haskanita said it was clear that the army or its allied militias of nomad Arabs known as the janjaweed were behind it.

Junta Raids Monasteries for Weapons

YANGON, MYANMAR | Myanmar's military leaders said weapons had been seized from Buddhist monasteries and announced dozens of new arrests Sunday, defying global outrage over its violent repression of protesters who sought an end to 45 years of dictatorship.

Recent raids on monasteries turned up guns, knives and ammunition, though it was not yet clear to whom they belonged, according to The New Light of Myanmar, a mouthpiece of the junta. The government threatened to punish any monks that violate the law, stepping up pressure on clerics who led the protests.

Security eased in the largest city of Yangon more than a week after soldiers and police opened fire on demonstrators. Some roadblocks were removed and visitors began trickling back to the heavily guarded Shwedagon and Sule pagodas, the starting and finishing points of protests that began in mid-August over a sharp fuel price increase. ## Storm Forces 1.4M To Flee in China

Five killed as typhoon Krosa soaks southeast; 55 killed in Vietnam

BEIJING | A storm drenched China's southeast on Sunday after killing five people on Taiwan and prompting the evacuation of 1.4 million people on the mainland, officials said. In Vietnam, the death toll from a separate storm rose to 55.

Krosa came ashore as a typhoon in China's Zhejiang and Fujian provinces, but weakened and was soon downgraded to a tropical storm, the official Xinhua News Agency said.

It said no deaths or injuries were reported, but the storm wrecked houses and knocked out power in the port city of Wenzhou as torrential rains swept the region.

More than 1.4 million people were evacuated from coastal areas, including more than 500,000 tourists who were at beach resorts for the National Day holiday week, Xinhua said.

Some 75,000 fishing vessels in the two provinces were ordered back to port and trips by ferries and sightseeing boats were canceled, the agency said.

Krosa — the Cambodian word for crane — killed five people Saturday on Taiwan as it knocked out power to 2 million homes and soaked the island, according to Taiwan's Disaster Relief Center. (AP)

KINSHASA, CONGO | Rebels have seized an area in eastern Congo that serves as a wildlife habitat for endangered mountain gorillas, threatening one of the last known populations of the animals, conservationists said Sunday.

Handheld Ultrasound

New devices check neck arteries for possible heart trouble

MADISON, WIS. | What if your doctor could swipe a wand over your neck and reveal whether you have hidden heart disease?

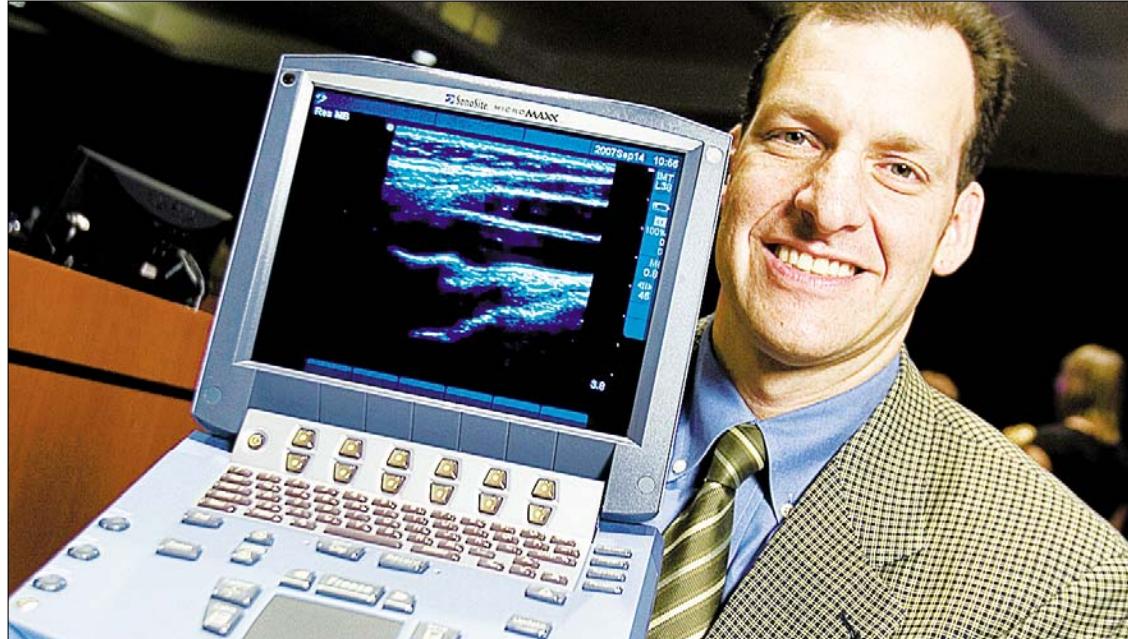

That is now possible in places other than the sickbay of the starship Enterprise.

Miniature ultrasound machines are starting to make their way into ordinary doctors' offices, where they may someday be as common as stethoscopes and EKGs. A pocket-sized one weighing less than 2 pounds hit the market last week.

Some of these devices can make images of neck arteries, which offer a "window" to heart arteries that cannot easily be seen.

If the neck vessels are clogged, doctors know that those around the heart probably are, too, and that treatment or more testing is needed.

The new ultrasound machines offer a relatively cheap, painless way to screen people with no symptoms of heart problems for signs of hidden trouble. Is that a good thing?

Dr. James Stein holds up a small ultrasound machine that is used by medical professionals to check whether a patient has heart disease that can be detected in neck arteries. The new machines are starting to make their way into ordinary doctors' offices.

Many doctors say yes, because for one-third of heart disease sufferers, the first symptom is dropping dead of a heart attack. Finding these people early and treating them could save lives.

The test may be especially good for women, who often have few traditional signs.

Lisa Rosenstock of Madison, Wis., is an example. At age 41, this trim, athletic mom had normal cholesterol and blood pressure but a troubling family history of heart attacks. Ultrasound revealed a big clog in the main artery from her heart to her head.

Her cardiologist, Dr. James Stein of the University of Wisconsin-Madison, put her on medicines to lower her risk of a heart attack or stroke.

He also is leading a study aimed at making ultrasound testing more common.

"There's a great need for a noninvasive and safe way to identify people who don't have signs but have risk" of heart disease, he said.

But there are potential downsides to more people doing this testing without extensive training.

Suddenly, small-town family doctors could see scary-looking artery buildups and rush to treat some that might never be life-threatening.

And while patients who see the pictures may be motivated to quit smoking, lose weight or go on cholesterol drugs, some might suffer side effects from unnecessary treatment.

Ultrasounds also are being advertised directly to consumers — the latest "peace of mind" test like whole-body CT scans and MRIs. Some drugmakers are promoting wider testing because it could boost cholesterol pill sales.

The American Heart Association says testing with traditional ultrasound machines can help certain patients, but does not endorse widespread screening with the small devices because proof of benefit is lacking. MARILYN MARCHIONE (AP)

An auto-body worker has been critically burned after he apparently caught himself on fire. D.C. Fire and EMS spokesman Alan Etter says the 62-year-old man has second- and third-degree burns on 70 percent of his body. Firefighters were called to the auto-body shop on H Street in Northeast Washington about 1 p.m. When the man's clothes caught on fire, he ran out of the shop and witnesses helped him put the fire out. Etter says investigators are still trying to determine what sparked the fire. (AP)

Death Mars Army Ten-Miler Race

Va. civilian runner collapses near finish line at the Pentagon

ARLINGTON, VA. | A runner from Fairfax County died Sunday during the Army Ten-Miler race, near the finish line at the Pentagon.

The runner collapsed about 10:40 a.m. about 200 yards from the finish line, said Col. Jim Yonts. Arlington County medics responded immediately and took the runner to George Washington University Hospital.

The cause of death is not yet known. Yonts said he did not know the runner's age. The runner was a civilian, not a member of the military, he said. "It's a tragedy nonetheless," Yonts said.

Amputees and wounded begin the Army Ten-Miler at the Pentagon on Sunday. More than 25,000 people registered for the race, the largest 10-mile race in the U.S.

A summer-like forecast of 70-degree temperatures and high humidity at the start of the race made it even more challenging for runners.

More than 25,000 people registered for the race — the largest 10-mile race in the United States. The 23rd annual race took runners from the Pentagon, across the Potomac River through the streets of Washington, past the Capitol building and back to the Pentagon in Arlington.

The runners included amputees who were injured in the Iraq war and a group of 36 women from Georgia whose husbands are deployed in the war zone.

There has only been one other death in the history of the Army Ten-Miler, in 1990, Yonts said. (AP)

U.S.' First Female Publisher Honored

Anne Catherine Green commemorated with ArtWalk mural in Md.

ANNAPOLIS, MD. | The more artist Sally Wern Comport read about America's first female newspaper publisher, the more she liked her.

Anne Catharine Green gave birth to 14 children and, with her husband, raised the six surviving ones in colonial Annapolis. But the husband's untimely death forced her into a new role as publisher of his paper, the Maryland Gazette.

There was no interruption of the printing of the paper, and Green announced her husband's death on the front page in 1767. According to state archives, she wrote she "shall venture to supply [customers] with News-Papers, on the same Terms he did."

After receiving complaints from William Paca about anonymous letters to the editor directed at him, Green began requiring that letters have names attached. Comport's grand vision of the printing magnate and of a print-shop worker were installed last month on the brick facade of a downtown bank, the fourth installation of a public art display celebrating the signing of Annapolis' charter 300 years ago.

A $70,000 grant from the Art in Public Places Commission sponsored ArtWalk, part of Annapolis 300, the yearlong celebration commemorating the charter established in 1708 by England's Queen Anne.

The completed ArtWalk will feature works by five area artists — Comport, Sy Mohr, Greg Harlin, George "Lassie" Belt and the late Marion Warren. Organizers would like to keep it installed for as long as three years.

The artwork is being displayed at six downtown sites, including the seawall at the Naval Academy, on West Street, the Annapolis harbormaster's building at City Dock, and Calvert Street near the Clay Street community. (AP)

Experts Demolish Baltimore Garage

BALTIMORE | Demolition experts brought down a hospital parking garage in Baltimore amid a cloud of billowing dust and cheers from onlookers. Baltimore County-based Controlled Demolition Inc., which has also demolished the Seattle Kingdome, the Alfred P. Murrah

Federal Building in Oklahoma and a number of Las Vegas hotels, set off the explosives. The 10-story garage was demolished to make room for a new 18-story medical tower at Mercy Hospital. (AP)

Dems Look To Regain Va. Senate

MCLEAN, VA. | It's been a rough run for Republicans in a state once as thoroughly red as Virginia, and Democrats believe this is the election when they finally reclaim control of the state Senate.

The past two governor's elections and last year's U.S. Senate race produced Democratic winners. Every legislative election since 2003 has seen the Democrats gain seats.

Now Democrats are fighting all out to counterbalance the powerful GOP ascendancy of the 1990s in an effort to win their first Senate majority in 12 years. Their chances of gaining the 11 GOP seats they would need to take over the House are almost nil this fall.

Winning the Senate is critical for both parties because it's the last state Senate election before the General Assembly redraws Virginia's legislative and congressional district boundaries in 2011. The party in control can tailor the lines with computer precision to lock in or expand its advantage for another 10 years. (AP)

Unlikely hero helps Redskins dismantle Lions at FedEx Field

REDSKINS | Mike Sellers hasn't been asking for the ball. He's been begging for it.

With the Redskins running out of options because of injuries, coach Joe Gibbs granted the burly fullback his wish. Sellers scored two touchdowns and rocked the stadium by bulldozing over a defensive back in the open field, a take-that kind of a statement in Sunday's creative and dominating 34-3 victory over the Detroit Lions.

"It's kind of embarrassing — because I've really, really been begging," said Sellers, who ran 1 yard for a score in the first half and caught an 8-yard touchdown pass in the second. "Every time a coach passes by, 'Can I run this

"It worked. I got a chance to do something."

The Redskins (3-1) dominated time of possession in the first half to wear down Detroit's defense on a hot day, keeping the NFL's No. 1 passing offense off the field. The Lions (3-2) had been averaging 28.5 points and 387.3 yards per game, but they could muster only a field goal and 144 total yards against a Washington defense that had five sacks by four players.

Antwaan Randle El, expected to carry the load in Moss' absence, had seven catches for 100 yards before leaving with a hamstring injury just before halftime.

Running short on manpower, the Redskins were forced to diversify. Jason Campbell relied heavily on screens, dinks and dunks to go 23-for-29 for 248 yards with two touchdowns and no interceptions. Eight different receivers caught passes, including James Thrash, Keenan McCardell and Brandon Lloyd, who each caught a pass for the first time this season. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Baltimore beats San Francisco with just 3 field goals of offense

RAVENS | Now Mike Nolan knows how it feels to be stymied and stifled by that Baltimore Ravens defense he used to run.

Ray Lewis, Ed Reed and their crew suffocated San Francisco on all but a few plays, and Matt Stover made up for Baltimore's near-equal offensive ineptitude with three field goals in the Ravens' 9-7 victory over Nolan's 49ers on Sunday.

Except for an inexplicable two-play sequence when San Francisco completed two long passes for 65 yards and its only score, the Baltimore defense applied the soundest beating yet to the 49ers (2-3), who lost their third straight while failing to gain 200 yards for the fourth time in five games.

Boston is the 3rd team this year to complete a postseason sweep

BASEBALL PLAYOFFS | At his best on baseball's biggest stage, Curt Schilling pitched the Boston Red Sox to another sweep of the Angels.

Schilling worked seven masterful innings, David Ortiz and Manny Ramirez homered, and the Red Sox routed Los Angeles 9-1 Sunday to complete a three-game sweep of their AL playoff series.

Boston joined the Arizona Diamondbacks and Colorado Rockies in sweeping a first-round series this October — this is the first time since the current format began in 1995 that it's happened.

The Red Sox earned themselves a long rest, too. They will open the AL championship series at Fenway Park on Friday night against either the Cleveland Indians or New York Yankees. Cleveland tried for a sweep Sunday night at Yankee Stadium.

Vladimir Guerrero and his Los Angeles teammates scored a mere four runs in three games. The Angels have lost nine straight playoff games to the Red Sox and seven straight postseason games overall.

Boston beat the Angels in the last three games of the 1986 ALCS and swept them in the first round of the 2004 playoffs.

Schilling raised his postseason record to 9-2 in 16 career starts while lowering his ERA to 1.93. Pitching for the first time in 12 days, he scattered six hits while walking one, striking out four and throwing 100 pitches — 76 for strikes.

He was at his best in his final inning of work. With the Red Sox leading just 2-0, Maicer Izturis doubled to start the Los Angeles seventh, but Howie Kendrick grounded to second, Juan Rivera popped to first and Mike Napoli struck out to end the inning. JOHN NADEL (AP)

Top 25 Littered With New Names

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | No doubt about it, LSU is No. 1. As for the rest of the top 25, five wild weeks of college football have taken quite a toll.

The Trojans fell to Stanford 24-23 on Saturday, then dropped eight spots in the rankings.

California is the new No. 2. Ohio State is No. 3 and No. 4 Boston College has its highest ranking ever. South Florida, which entered the poll for the first time three weeks ago, is now No. 5.

Another four top-10 teams, and 11 ranked teams overall, went down Saturday.

As a result, there are 10 teams in the latest rankings, including four in the top 10 (BC, USF, No. 7 South Carolina and No. 9 Oregon), that were unranked to start the season.

TODAY'S TV LINEUP

CAPITALS (2 P.M. ON CSN) Two straight wins is a good way to start the season. The Capitals travel to New York to face the Islanders and try to move to 3-0.

BASEBALL (6:30 P.M. ON TBS) The Yankees and Indians were playing after Express' deadline. If New York dodged the sweep, Mike Mussina will fight for survival in game four.

FOOTBALL (8:30 P.M. ON ESPN) The Cowboys are 4-0, and Tony Romo isn't prepared to tarnish his spotless record with a loss to the young, upstart Buffalo Bills on Monday night.

TAKE THAT, SMALL FUNNY MAN: Movie audiences just couldn't get enough of the Rock this weekend. "The Game Plan" was No. 1 for a second week and beat out the Farrelly Brothers' new comedy "The Heartbreak Kid," starring Ben Stiller.

Entertainment

LOOK, BUT DON'T TOUCH: ABC's "Pushing Daisies" is a relentlessly quirky comedy about a man with death in his hands.

The Big Picture

TV's new fall season balances laugh tracks with ... philosophy?

WHAT'S IT ABOUT? | This fall, lots of TV drama is a life-and-death affair. Several new dramas — however much they may vary otherwise — share a common concern with resurrection and redemption, with life as it coexists with death.

Sam, the slacker hero of the CW's supernatural comedy "Reaper," learns he's obliged to serve the devil by tracking down evil souls and sending those fugitives back to hell. It's a lot tougher work than his dead-end job at a hardware outlet. But, to his surprise, it brings him new meaning and direction.

On NBC's "Life," a cop wrongfully imprisoned for 12 years is cleared of the crime. He returns to the outside world — and the LAPD — with a new attitude. He isn't just released from jail; he's sprung from a lifelong psychic prison.

Likewise, the heroine of NBC's "Bionic Woman" is surgically reborn after a ghastly auto accident. She emerges as part human, part machine. And part lab rat for the shadowy Berkut Group. Can she pull herself together?

But when it comes to life-and-death issues, a pie-maker named Ned takes the cake. On ABC's mystical "Pushing Daisies," Ned discovers that, with a single touch, he can restore life. But then, with his next touch, he shuts it down again.

"Pushing Daisies" and other newcomers seem attuned to viewer weariness from themes of war and terrorism, from the global heebie-jeebies that have fueled so many shows in recent years.

On NBC's "Chuck," a department store computer tech is dragged into perilous cloak-and-dagger intrigue. Even so, the emphasis isn't on counterterrorism but on self-actualization: How does it feel to be unwittingly implanted with all the U.S. government's most sensitive, valuable secrets?

Chuck finds it pretty unsettling. "There's something wrong with me," he moans. "I'm remembering things I shouldn't know!"

On CBS' gothic thriller "Moonlight," Mick St. John is a forever-young, good vampire who solves crimes committed by bad vampires. He runs into a little girl he rescued from a vampire's clutches a couple of decades ago. Now she's all grown up — and gorgeous, and maybe interested in Mick. He decides they can be friends, and even work together solving murders (she's an investigative journalist). But he knows they can never, um, go all the way.

"You just can't bear the thought of seeing yourself as a monster in someone else's eyes," he wistfully explains to the audience.

THE KLAXONS Sound the Alarm

1 We're not sure what "nu-rave" is, but we do know that the Klaxons took the British pop press and public by surprise when they won the prestigious Mercury Award earlier this year, and that the noisy quartet smooches punk rock and dance music together into something entirely new. They make a mess at the 9:30 tonight with Washington Social Club.

→ 9:30 Club, 815 V St. NW; 7:30, 9 p.m., $15; 202-265-0930. (U St.-Cardozo)

RAUL MIDON Gently Jazz

2 Raul Midon has both the appeal of a sharp-cornered and endlessly inventive jazz-man and the intimate allure of a singer-songwriter. Either way, the guitarist-singer puts on a warm and uplifting stage show.

→ Birchmere Music Hall, 3701 Mt. Vernon Ave., Alexandria; with Eric Hutchinson, 7 p.m., $25; 703-549-7500.

COLUMBUS DAY CEREMONY The Ocean Blue

3 The Italian explorer gets a tribute this Columbus Day morning with a performance by the U.S. Marine band and a wreath-laying at the site of his effigy. And if you didn't know there was a Columbus statue in D.C., that's probably because it's so big you missed it.

→ Union Station, 50 Massachusetts Ave. NE; 11 a.m., free; 202-619-7222.

An Indie Princess Looks Inside

PJ Harvey gets introspective on a piano-driven release

MUSIC | PJ Harvey has long been known as the queen of indie rock 'n' roll blues; a British rose blackened at the edges. From 1992's raw debut "Dry" to 2004's snarling "Uh Huh Her," she has released an onslaught of fuzzy guitar and worldly lyrics.

"White Chalk" (Island), her eighth studio album, is Harvey's biggest departure yet — a piano-based collection of 11 solitary and lovely tunes.

Co-produced by Harvey and her longtime collaborators Flood and John Parish, the album starts off with Harvey's normally growled vocals turning airy on "The Devil." The album ends with a haunted moan on "The Mountain."

A poet at heart, Harvey always bites with her words, whether they're lifted in rage as on her early work or plunged down to earth with depression here.

"The ceiling is moving, moving in time. Like a conveyer belt, above my eyes," she croons scratchily over a refined melody on "When Under Ether."

PJ Harvey's "White Chalk" boasts poetic lyrics and lovely, fuzz-free tunes.

Harmonica and staccato piano feed the breakup tune "Silence."

"I freed myself from my family,

I freed myself from work, I freed myself... and remained alone," Harvey laments in an elegant vibrato.

"Dear Darkness" is a deceptively simple yet catchy plea whispered with emotion. "Dear darkness, won't you cover, cover me again," Harvey sings. "I've been your friend for many years."

True, 1998's "Is This Desire?" and 2000's "Stories From the City, Stories From the Sea" mined Harvey's more atmospheric tendencies, but "White Chalk" proves she has a matured knack for intimacy — without the cushion of loudness or fuzz.

'Evan Almighty' falls flat on disc, while a debut resurfaces

DVDS | The idea probably looked great on paper: Do a sequel to the popular 2003 Jim Carrey comedy "Bruce Almighty" about a TV news reporter who is visited by a new-wavish God (Morgan Freeman), cast funnyman Steve Carell, who played Evan, the anchorman whom Bruce despised, bring back Freeman and beef up the budget to $175 million.

The result, "Evan Almighty," debuting Tuesday on DVD, is less than a "divine" comedy. Although Carell manages to get laughs, "Evan Almighty" was a critical and financial disappointment.

But the film certainly didn't hurt Carell's career. He just returned for his fourth season on NBC's "The Office"; the romantic comedy "Dan in Real Life" is scheduled for release Oct. 26; and he just finished the big-screen version of "Get Smart."

"Evan Almighty" may have bombed, but Steve Carell's career didn't suffer.

Elsewhere, iconoclastic film director Gus Van Sant ("My Own Private Idaho," "Good Will Hunting") made his feature debut with 1985's "Mala Noche" (Bad Night), which arrives on Tuesday in a special edition from Criterion.

Produced for a threadbare $25,000 and based on the autobiographical novella by Oregon poet Walt Curtis, the film revolves around a young man (Tim Streeter) who works at a convenience store in the seedier part of Portland, Ore. — Van Sant's hometown.

Curtis falls head over heels for a handsome Latino boy (Doug Cooley) who is in this country illegally and doesn't speak English.

The extras on the DVD includes a new interview with Van Sant, who also supervised and approved the restored, high-definition digital transfer of the black-and-white film, a documentary on Curtis, a storyboard gallery and the original trailer edited by Van Sant.

A PBS Columbus documentary charts historical territory

LAND HO! "The Magnificent Voyage of Christopher Columbus" (9 p.m., PBS) follows modern-day sailors as they re-create the 1492 voyage of the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria.

Along the way, we visit some of the Spanish towns that were home to the sailors and navigators of the history-changing adventure. After more than 500 years, descendants of his crew still trace their proud origins, and local musicians still sing of the voyage.

TINY SHIP: A replica of the alarmingly small Nina sets sail on modern waters.

"Voyage" also drops in on the Canary Islands, the westernmost outpost of Spain in the late 15th century, where Columbus had the rudder of the Pinta repaired and, some say, got some romantic encouragement from a local aristocratic widow.

The first half of "Voyage" follows the diaries of Columbus as his three ships sailed into the unknown. The second half contemplates the dramatic impact and unintended consequences of his trip to "the Indies."

As one expert opines here, Columbus' voyages initiated a transoceanic migration of people, animals, plants and diseases that affected just about everybody on the planet. KEVIN McDONOUGH (United Feature Syndicate)

Shoemakers will fight for new customers at the Beijing Olympics

The Beijing Olympics are less than a year away, and one of the hottest competitions is not among the athletes, but the companies that outfit them.

China is one of the largest emerging markets in the world—a top priority for shoemakers fighting for increased market share. And as the 2008 Beijing Olympics approach, the intensity is reaching a new high.

"The Beijing 2008 Games are set to be the greatest sporting event in modern Chinese history," said Paul Pi, head of marketing for Adidas in greater China.

Adidas is an official sponsor of the Olympics. In addition to paying a reported $80 million for the sponsorship position, the company has coordinated a marketing blitz that includes opening an average of two stores a day in the country.

The German company has declared the event will help make it the No. 1 athletic brand in China by 2008, a coveted spot now held by shoe giant Nike.

"The Chinese marketplace is the most exciting marketplace in the world," said Nike Brand President Charlie Denson.

Nike is sponsoring 22 of the 28 competing Chinese federations. And it has one of China's hottest athletes, hurdler Liu Xiang, wearing the swoosh.

In third place is Chinese company Li Ning — a premium local brand that is a fraction of the size of its international competitors. Founded by a former Chinese gymnast, the company has ramped up its design team and is sponsoring several Chinese teams slated to be strong contenders in the games.

But shoemakers say the race isn't over when the medals are handed out.

Denson says the years following the Olympics may be even more exciting than this growth period.

It's a sentiment shared by both companies.

The games will represent a "real, tangible sea-change in attitudes toward sport in China," Pi said, by spreading a growing trend of interest in athletics and the athletic lifestyle.

Sports were once seen as a luxury in China. But as the middle class has grown and culture has changed, interest has exploded.

Parks and other facilities are being built and opening up to the public. Basketball has become a top sport, and viewers can watch several NBA games a week in China's major cities.

Companies like Nike and Adidas, which have had a presence in the country for decades, have helped spur the growth with sponsorship of teams and tournaments. Nike has made serious community inroads in China, such as investing in Dong Dan Park in Beijing, the equivalent of draping a major city park with a swoosh.

China is one of the largest emerging markets in the world — a top priority for shoemakers.

As payoff for the long-term work, a surprising number of Chinese consumers are buying premium brands like Nike and Adidas, despite low incomes and prices several times that of a traditional Chinese shoe. Other brands such as New Balance, Pony and Puma are making inroads as well.

"Puma, Nike, Adidas — I wear all of them," said Ms. Wang, a 24-year-old who works in advertising in Beijing and would only give her surname.

"I really care about the style and design. It's very important, and that's why I like foreign brands more," she said.

Young urban Chinese, and a growing minority in the countryside, are like their counterparts from Brooklyn to Bangkok: They wear athletic shoes, baggy T-shirts and track suits.

The race for marketshare in China won't end with the Olympics; it could become even more exciting after the Games are over.

"Can the shoe wars be determined by the Olympics?" Rhoades asked. "No, but it's one more battle."

Turn Water Into Wine

Luxury Goods

Connoisseurs will pay big bucks for a sip of exotic bottled water

Forget eight glasses a day. Have you had your 28 gallons a year?

This is not about basic hydration. That's how much bottled water — which costs more, per gallon, than gasoline — the typical American consumed last year.

And yet, even with all the recent attention to the ecological impact of this ubiquitous beverage, most Americans know very little about the $11 billion worth of water they drink a year. But they should, according to experts who compare bottled water to wine.

"We usually think it's all the same, but it isn't because of trace elements, minerals, packaging," said Arthur von Wiesenberger, who works as a consultant.

"Water is an amazing thing," he said. "It will reach out and touch

Bottled waters may look all the same, but experts say there are subtle differences.

something."

And the something that it touches will give it a distinct taste and even "mouthfeel," in the parlance of water tasters.

Potassium, for example, may give water a sweet taste. Silica may impart silkiness. Calcium can give the water a lactic taste some people find refreshing. Others enjoy the cleansing quality of water with a high sodium content.

"Bottled water is the next wine," said Michael Mascha, founder of

In a general sense, bottled water is making the transition from a commodity product to one with terroir."

finewaters.com, a site dedicated to cataloging and evaluating bottled waters from around the world.

"People are starting to pay attention to where water is coming from. In a general sense, bottled water is making the transition from a commodity product to one with terroir," he said.

Long a staple of European tables, bottled water was popular in the U.S. during the early 20th century, but vanished during the Great Depression. It resurfaced during the 1970s, when Perrier was photographed in the hands of glitterati.

During the past five years, consumption surged 59 percent, making it America's favorite beverage after soda.

In the United States, consumers can now pick from about 350 varieties of bottled water, ranging from purified tap water to waters bottled from particular sources. The waters can come from springs, underground reservoirs called aquifers, or even from glaciers or harvested rainfall.

And each source, say connoisseurs, has its own fingerprint.

In Philadelphia, Water Works Restaurant and Lounge stocks nearly two dozen waters from around the world and caters to a regular crowd of newly minted connoisseurs willing to pay up to $55 a bottle.

"We have several regular customers who come in and have to have their water and it's chilled to a different degree," said Vera Masi, the restaurant's guest services coordinator.

"Some people will taste it and actually say 'This is woodsy' or 'This is crisp,'" she said.

The restaurant's most expensive water, the $55 Bling H2O, comes in a vessel encrusted with Swarovski rhinestones. "I guarantee you that every single person who orders the Bling takes the bottle home with them," she says.

It seemed a little risky to try out something named MIDNIGHT POISON ($45, Sephora.com) at 10:30 a.m. Before we even snatched the Dior perfume from its ominously deep-blue box, a tinge of patchouli had already wafted through the air. The blue orb of a bottle is sexy — in the manner of a sorceress about to put a hex on you — so one expects a scent of seduction. Instead, we inhaled heady masculine overtones coupled with a lingering trace of Listerine. This is cologne trapped in a perfume's bottle — it's made for a woman, but it belongs on a man. ## Call It Hollyween

'High School Musical' to '300' influence this year's costumes

Pretty soon, we'll be calling Oct. 31 Hollyween instead of Halloween.

The National Retail Federation picks princesses and pirates, often of the Disney variety, and Spider-Man to be the top children's costumes of the year, while Yahoo! Shopping adds "Star Wars," "Hannah Montana" and "High School Musical" as favorites with trick-or-treaters.

"Sometimes I feel I'm either on Wall Street or a movie mogul, I pay such attention to the box office," says Mary Ellen Turner, Party City's divisional vice president of seasonal departments.

At Party City, "Transformers" and "Hannah Montana" costumes are on top, while Amazon.com's Halloween store suggests "Harry Potter," "Shrek" and "High School Musical."

And it's not just movies — the big names in toys are another source of costume inspiration. Barbie-themed costumes are consistent performers and Transformers were in toy chests before they stormed the movie industry.

"A licensed character is a powerful engine, whether it starts with a DVD, a Saturday morning cartoon, a network or a book like 'Narnia' or 'Harry Potter,'" says Turner.

Not Just Kid's Play

Even adults aren't immune to the lure of Hollywood.

Costumes mimicking "Reno 911" rank as men's top sellers and even long-time faves "Freddy" and "Jason" first showed up in horror films.

The gory movie "300" wasn't really on the radar as a hot movie this past spring, Turner recalls, but she saw the marketing barometer begin to move and Party City called its costume supplier long before it became a sleeper hit grossing more than $200 million.

Littlest Treats

Babies don't always toe the Tinseltown line. Parents go for the cute factor, says Cari Shapiro, the vice president of merchandising for Babies "R" Us.

Shapiro is dressing her 19-month-old twins as Elmo.

"They put it on, looked at each other and laughed at their mirror image," she explains. "It's something they understand."

Family Sized

The pirate theme, also a success last year, appeals to the family that wants to dress as a unit, says Amy Hauk, senior vice president and general merchandise manager of Disney Store, which happens to have versions of Jack Sparrow and Elizabeth Swann for all ages.

Yes, many people have already bought their costumes, several weeks before Hallowewn.

Parents need to be prepared says Mark Randall, vice president of toys and baby for Amazon.com: "Mid-October is the peak, but even right now is the sweet spot."

SAMANTHA CRITCHELL (AP)

Beauty

Makes Your Eyes Pôp

Lancôme won't stop with just one circumflex. No, while innocents slept, the cosmetics manufacturer doubled its diacritical load and built another little hat thingy into the name of a new product, LANCÔME COURBE VIRTUÔSE DIVINE LASTING CURVES MASCARA ($23, lancome-usa.com).

So is all this fancy spelling justified? The firm, curved brush gave some of the best lash separation we've seen, and the formula keeps its curl without feeling like a few coats of lacquer. It didn't flake, and it handled fine lower lashes with aplomb. (EXPRESS)

Dog Whisperer

CESAR MILLAN, host of National Geographic Channel's "Dog Whisperer," was online to talk about his show and his new book, "Be the Pack Leader: Use Cesar's Way to Transform Your Dog ... and Your Life."

Can dogfighting dogs (typically pit bulls) be rehabbed and rescued or must they be euthanized? Are there risks involved long-term in a rescued pit bull with an unknown background?

Nine out of 10 pit bulls we have gotten from dogfighting we have rehabilitated and gotten into great homes. Even if they can't go back into society, you can create sanctuaries for them instead. But someone who is going to adopt a dog like this has to be in tune with Mother Nature. And it's not the breed, it's the human behind the dog. Aggression is a state of mind, not a breed thing.

What's the best way to prepare your dog for a new baby?

The basics are to make sure the dog knows what position he plays — that all humans in the house are pack leaders, and when the baby comes into the picture, make sure it is carried with no nervous energy, and make sure the dog is tired when you bring the baby into the house. Don't worry about hurting the dog's feelings — they don't rationalize, they want the best for the family.

I have a pit bull, an incredibly wonderful, loving, active, sweet animal. What do I have to do to convince other people that these dogs are not dangerous but actually really awesome pets?

The best way to fight that is education. You can start in the where you live, just make sure people are willing to listen to you.
